TAFT IN A ROUND-UP

Rides a Cayuse on His Brother's Big Ranch.

SEES THE "CATTLE DIP"

Shows Interest in Slaughter of the Terrible Texas Tick.

OUTS OUT WILDCAT HUNT

But Will Go After Jack Rabbits Tomorrow if the Cayuse Can Stand It.

GREGORY, Tex., October 20.—President Taft stood on shore yesterday and watched his "suite" as he jokingly calls the members of his party, bathing in the warm waters of the Gulf of Mexico. "How are you enjoying it, Mr. President?" a dripping member of the suite called out.

"I'm having a good time," Mr. Taft answered, "and I'm not going to let any one break in on it."

The wild west touch necessary to the day was added by the cowpunchers of La Quinta ranch, and by Capt. Archie Butt and Secretary of War Dickinson. The cowpunchers took to Mr. Taft a wildcat, a javelina and an opossum. All of these were dead, except the opossum, which had been caught alive in the Baptist Church at Aransas, ten miles away.

In talking about the javelina down here on the Mexican border one must be careful to give the "j" the sound of "h." The "havelina" is a counterpart of the wild boar that Kaiser Wilhelm fights in the forests of Germany, except that it is not quite so big. But it is a fierce animal. Every hunter that kills one is a witness to this statement.

Capt. Butt, aid to the President, and Secretary Dickinson went duck hunting with notable success.

Watches the Sunset.

The final feature of the day was sunset on the plains, and it impressed President Taft more than anything he has seen since coming to the southwest. He studied the western sky a long time in silence. "It is the most beautiful scene I ever witnessed," he said.

When the President was taken three miles from Gregory Monday night in an automobile to the farmhouse of the Charles P. Taft ranch and took a good look at the city that is to grow about it.

"Camping out," he replied. "Charlie, you told me that I was to come down here and camp out and look at it!" pointing to the mansion.

"How are you fixed?" the President asked of other members of his party yesterday morning. "Are you camping out, too?"

They are the other members of the party—in a hotel that lacks what Broadway has only in size. On this plain, broken by mesquite brush, at a town built at the foot of a switch, Charles P. Taft has put up a hostelry that would do credit to a city of 100,000 people. It was completed just before the party arrived and Charles P. Taft insists that it was not made for the occasion but in anticipation of city that is to grow about it. The site of the city extends as far as the eye can reach to the four points of the compass, and all of it is on the ranch of 100,000 acres and bare of human habitation.

In the Saddle Today.

While the President did not exert himself yesterday beyond a game of golf with his niece, Miss Louise Taft, he will be in the saddle at a round-up today on the Rincorn ranch. That is part of the vast estate of his brother. The saddle was made at Santa Gertrudes and has been presented by the cowpunchers of La Quinta ranch. The horse is a bay, and an air of philosophy that makes light of 300 pounds.

Besides the round-up, the President will witness the branding and "dipping" of cattle. Dipping is a process to rid the cattle of ticks. A narrow vat, 100 feet long, is used, and a liquid that is death to ticks. The cattle, thousands of them, are driven into a chute whose only exit is a plunge into the 100-foot bath. Instinctively the cattle swim through this, and the treatment is over, funerals in the tick family following at once.

The tick, as explained here in the home of the cattle raiser, is a product of civilization. In the old days, before there were fences and towns, the Indians burned off the dry grass in the fall, and in the spring laid a new crop of green grass, without pernicious insects. But if those fires were started now they would burn all the evidences of civilization. The tick has taken advantage of these conditions, and has multiplied far beyond anything covered by the highest schools of arithmetic. As a result, the raiser of modern cattle has given them a medicine bath every once in a while. Mr. Taft is much interested in this phase of ranching, as the government is taking an active part in instructing ranchmen in the new methods.

Will Not Hunt Wild Cats.

After the round-up there will be a hunt of jack rabbits, but the President has not decided that he will participate. He will wait until he sees how the cayuse stands his weight earlier in the day. The wildcat hunt arranged for him the President has definitely cut out. He is much interested in it, and will receive bulletins, but he will not ride to hounds.

Col. Cecil Lyon, republican boss of Texas, who is in the Taft party at the Taft ranch home, had an exciting time Monday night. He had a room with three windows, and bragged about it. Near morning a small cyclone, accompanied by rain, came up and Col. Lyon awakened suddenly to find himself struggling with some wooden incumbrance that was trying to wrestle him out of bed.

"Being in the lumber business," said Mr. Lyon yesterday, "half awake, I thought I had gone to sleep in my yard and that a pile of lumber had fallen on me. Dr. Richardson (the President's physician) rushed to my assistance, and between us we conquered the awful thing. The wind had blown a screen clear across the room on to me."

Col. Lyon Sees an Eagle.

"By the way," the colonel concluded, "at the rear of the Charles P. Taft home is a flagpole. When we arrived at the house last night an eagle was perched on it, above the Stars and Stripes. It was an inspiring sight."

"Where did the eagle come from?" asked Col. Lewis of the Aransas Pass railroad, who has lived around here all his life. "There hasn't been an eagle here before in my mind he will not do anything formal."

"I am going to do as I please," he said, "there was a word between 'I' and 'please' that emphasized the statement."

John S. McGill Dead.

LLANO, Tex., October 20.—John S. McGill, forty-five years of age, widely known newspaper man, died here yesterday of complications caused by stomach trouble. Previous to coming west Mr. McGill was on the staff of newspapers in New York and later at Chicago and San Francisco.

A Telling Question!

Benzoate of Soda is a coal tar drug. If there is any good in it for you when used in food, why doesn't the manufacturer who uses it blazon it in large letters on the label instead of whispering it in the smallest type he can find?

Heinz 57 Varieties—Tomato Ketchup, Sweet Pickles, Fruit Butters, Preserves, Mince Meat, etc., do not contain Benzoate of Soda.

Be sure to read labels on all fruit and tomato products.
